

Semiclassical Initial Value Representations (IVRs) have proven to be successful methods for the approximation of single-state molecular dynamics. The talk will illustrate the mathematical conception of these algorithms and elucidate in which way the mathematical community can contribute to the understanding of IVRs